The Calgary Chamber of Commerce and The Van Horne Institute present

Brian Flemming, Chairman Canadian Air Transport Security Authority

The war on terror that has gripped the Western world since September 11, 2001 started with the hijacking of four planes.

On September 12, 2001 governments around the world began to re-examine, re-think and re-build air transport security systems to combat what was previously unthinkable. The Canadian government responded with a complete overhaul of the country's security infrastructure, including the creation of the Canadian Air Transport Security Authority (CATSA). Brian Flemming, chairman of CATSA, will speak about the mandate of CATSA, its progress to date and its plans for the future."
